In recognition of a career . . .

For thirty-seven years the many students of Bourne High School have been guided by a man sincerely interested in the scholastic well-being of such individuals. Always aware of the vital importance of advanced education in the twentieth century world, this man was willing to work in a Maine copper mill and to play the trumpet in an orchestra to earn enough money to go to Bates College. He came to our high school as a chemistry teacher; in the following years he became principal. It must have been a rewarding experience to be able to contribute to the growth of a school and the learning of its students.

Representing the students of Bourne High School today and the now-adults of Bourne's past, we would like to dedicate this yearbook to our principal, Walter J. Stahura.

ADMINISTRATION

Now when an education is imperative for moving the wheels of success, dedicated, qualified administrators are a necessity. The students enrolled in the Bourne School System are fortunate to have such a skilled administration—one that more than fulfills the above requirements. A mark of the kind of good management that Bourne High has is that the results are visible, although the action itself is barely perceptible. Firmly behind the smooth-running surface, these men perform the overwhelming work of keeping a high school going.

a sound educational program

Mr. Walter J. Stahura, principal, being interviewed by Miss Christine Taylor.

AN INTERVIEW

This years Canal Currents copy editor, Christine Taylor, conducted the following interview with Mr. Stahura.

Question: "What distinguishes this senior class from other classes?"

Answer: "Each year youngsters are better educated because there is more to learn. Considering only one brief year, that of junior to senior, there are so many advances in so many fields that the alert student can't help but be better informed."

Question: "Have students undergone any vast changes?"

Answer: "Vast, no: changes, yes. Students today are concerned about the political, social, economic state of the nation, indeed of the world. The greater majority of students seem to have a desire to take a definite place in contributing to our nation's welfare. It is too bad that the public gets a picture of youth as the result of some uncomplimentary things youngsters do, when in reality much is contributed and will continue to be contributed by some young people — perhaps much that never reaches the newspapers. I have learned never to sell youngsters short because history has proved that in times of stress and strain youngsters have a way of 'coming through'."

Question: "Do you have a message for the students of Bourne High School?"

Answer: "This is just the beginning of your education; continue it throughout your lifetime. A tragedy would be in having this education cease at this point."

Mr. Alexander Consoni
Business Manager

The basic commodities of running a school are efficiently taken care of by our Business Office. Not only does this office handle all of the school's financial matters, but it also has the nerve-racking job of scheduling all of the buses. As a result of the laborious efforts of Mr. Alex Consoni, Business Manager of the Bourne School District, the Bourne student is confronted only with the reality of a well-ordered school.

Office . . .

SECRETARIAL STAFF

Mrs. Dvorski, Mrs. Shade, Miss Mohre, Mrs. Holland—these women whip through the flood of paper work that daily descends upon the offices. Good-humored and competent, these secretaries are excellent examples of business-like expertness for all future secretaries.

and Guidance

BUSINESS OFFICE

What course? What job? What college? Desperate cries from the bewildered masses! If high school were an obstacle course, our guidance counselors would be the boost over many academic stumbling blocks. Willing to listen to the students' endless problems and to offer friendly advice, ready to tackle the tremendous job of writing individual programs, happy to make sure that the correct choices are being made, Mr. Gray, Mr. Burns, and Mr. Ciolkowski are indispensable individuals at Bourne High School. The student may be sure that he will leave their office with answers to all his queries.

ENGLISH DEPARTMENT

English, the art of communications, not only prepares the student for the mundane activities of life for which a firm command of proper grammar and the sharp angles of clear thought are mandatory, but also introduces him to the more ethereal aspects of living. Discovered is the immense world of the written word containing a gamut of emotions, perceptions, and philosophies. From this world speak MacBeth, Gatsby, and Pickwick. Mrs. Kiniry, along with Miss Rice, Miss Anderson, Mr. Stinson, Mr. Gregory, and Miss Tinkham are aided by these fictional characters in their endeavors to instill in the student an understanding of and a love for literature.

LANGUAGE DEPARTMENT

Voulez-vous parler-loqui-sprechen? At Bourne High one may take excellent courses in French, Latin, or German and participate in the exciting language clubs. A language laboratory, originality, and sincere interest help our teachers to make each language a living experience for the student. Educational and enjoyable, those classes promote a definite interest in other lands and people — an interest which helps create a better understanding of their cultures and problems.

The logic of mathematics

Mr. Raymond F. Fitzgerald
Department Head

MATHEMATICS DEPARTMENT

Equations, formulas, proofs, derivatives—the exact world of mathematical truths sometimes presents problems for the not-so-exact students. From the basic to the abstruse, from the ridiculous to the sublime, students grope their way towards a clear light of reason by using the definite steps of math to help develop more logical minds. Mr. Fitzgerald leads his stalwart army of teachers in the never ending battle of supreme rationalization versus student confusion. “To right the unrightable wrong...”—that is their quest.

SCIENCE DEPARTMENT

Besides supervising the often untidy experiments of the perhaps future physicists, surgeons, chemists, and geologists, the Bourne science teachers must find time to instruct these students in theoretical as well as experimental knowledge. Mutilating innocuous frogs and amoeba, concocting sulphur-dioxide, (singing a cheerful tune?) students march down the merry paths of science. The teachers work as a team to provide an environment in which students will eagerly seek out Truth. This year as Canalmen passed from earth science to biology to chemistry to physics or advanced biology, teachers breathed sighs of relief as well as of accomplishment.

SOCIAL STUDIES DEPARTMENT

While seniors deliberate over the weighty enigma of the modern world, preparing to offer compact solutions, freshmen are learning to appreciate the present life by delving into the history of ancient civilizations. From the Austrolopithicene conquests to the Great Society, no matter how involved the material, the excellent teachers manage to make interesting a study of social man and thereby spur the student on to further research in this area of time analysis.

BUSINESS DEPARTMENT

The students of Bourne High School are most fortunate to have the superior instruction of an excellent business department. Crusading to teach us the skills we must know to conquer the business world, these teachers constantly astound us with their limitless knowledge of the intricacies of bookkeeping, shorthand, typing and numerous other subjects. At some future time we will pause in the midst of the busy schedule of our high paying executive job and glance at the splendor of our Manhattan office long enough to marvel at and be thankful for the patience and talent these educators showed while instilling in us the necessary business knowledge and attitudes.

Miss Sandra Rubin

Projects improve practical skills

Mr. Emile Roberge

Mr. John Dunn

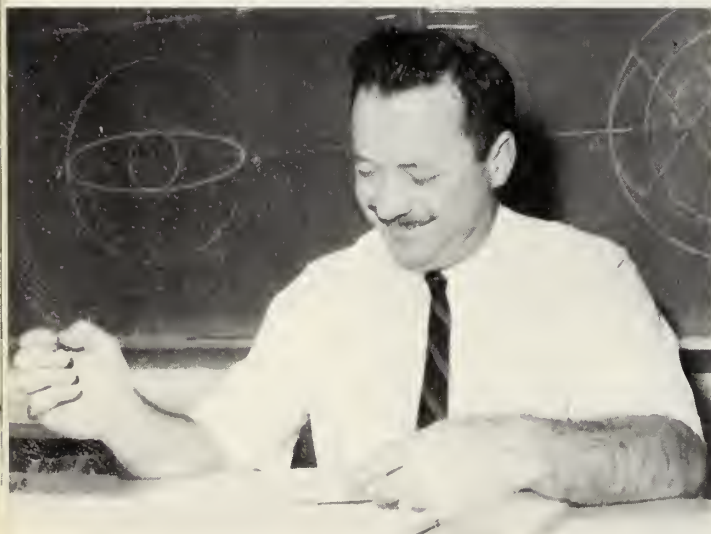

Mrs. Beatrice Turner

PRACTICAL ARTS DEPARTMENT

Bourne does not produce only the future presidents, the perspicacious geniuses, the nuclear physicists. A tantalizing aroma which irresistably draws students towards the home economics rooms indicates the presence of various nonpareil talents. Prepared by Mrs. Jack Turner, courses which help girls understand nutrition values, complicated dress patterns, recipe book instructions, and the social graces are eagerly taken by many.

Down a few corridors, a different group is engaged in other interesting activities. Besides helping the boys achieve a certain technical skill, mechanical drawing, wood, and metal classes stimulate an interest in the industrial world as a possible future career field. Through the excellent supervision of Mr. Roberge and the dedicated patience of Mr. Dunn and Mr. Watson, attending these classes has become a memorable experience.

Encouraging Physical Fitness

PHYSICAL EDUCATION

While the boys were engaged in emulating Hercules, Atlas, and other local Greek volleyball champions, the girls exercised originality, creativity, and graceful motions in a program of modern dancing and gymnastics—both groups completely oblivious to the Other Domain across the gym . . . (partially oblivious?). The girls enjoyed having two gym teachers this year, Mrs. Sullivan and Mrs. Pen-theny, each teacher giving instruction in her particular field. Designed to relax strained brains and to provide help in physical improvement, these classes are among the few that are never dreaded by the students.

Mr. Richard Stewart

Specialists . . .

Mrs. Elizabeth Ellis

Mrs. Virginia Adair

Mrs. Bertha Mayhew

Mr. Jeremiah Lyon

Mr. Lyon, Bourne's art director, attempts to bring out the latent talents of the individual student. A new project on the art course agenda was a research paper which contained not only the prose explanation of the chosen subject, but also the student's own illustrations. The "left bank" of Bourne High has participated in many local and national contests and has frequently decorated the school walls with various artistic displays.

The special classes at Bourne

High are supervised by the proficient and dedicated Mrs. Ellis.

"Mrs. Mayhew - help" echoed through the hallways as desperate seniors tried to cope with the frustrations of composing term papers. Rushing to the aid of such beleaguered individuals is only a small part of the work of our librarian, Mrs. Bertha Mayhew. She also offers quantities of exciting entertainment literature for the book-minded student.

Mrs. Adair, a new addition to the reading staff, this year worked with Bourne students to develop their reading skills.

Driver Ed. . . .

Wheels smoking, breaks screaming, a familiar car smashes to a halt in front of Bourne High. "Gently, gently, gently, gently..." whispers a weak voice from within the auto. Our somewhat martyred Driver's Ed instructor somehow manages to remain calm despite the high spirits and often displayed talent of Bourne's newest macadam maniacs. In a stationary or moving classroom, Mr. Delaney's careful explanation of laws and requirements for good driving, mechanics and construction for better understanding, produce safe (not necessarily sane) drivers.

Mr. William Delaney
Driver Education Instructor

Mrs. Joan Coggeshall

Mr. Robert Frazier
Department Head

Music

"Musical training is a more potent instrument than any other, because rhythm and harmony find their way into the inward places of the soul." The goal of Bourne's music program is to enrich the minds of all students and to bring music closer to the heart of each individual. Under the direction of Mr. Robert Frazier, each student has the opportunity to magnify his scope of musical knowledge by entering into band, instrumental training, chorus, or the new course of World Music; each student can enjoy this most personal form of self-expression.

P. Q. S. R.

Besides the faculty and the administration there are certain very important members of the personnel who can be classified as — Persons Qualified for Special Recognition. A school requires the work of many kinds of people if it is to function efficiently.

CLASS HISTORY

MICROCOSM '67

"Time present and time past
Are both perhaps present in time future,
And time future contained in time past."

Leaving Bourne High School, the members of the senior class of 1967 are most aware of the vivid events of this crowded closing year: this now; these applications, exams, term papers, college boards; the last football, basketball, hockey games; a bonfire and a play . . . . One seems to be living in the vital present — every hour absolutely known, final, finished — but each action now is the end of previous minutes. Each Bourne senior contains the past four years.

SENIORS

How can one define a senior class at Bourne High School? 1967—guided by various able advisors: Mr. Wilbur meeting that first tremulous group, Miss Schoenborn contending with those "wise fools", Mr. Putnam surmounting the difficulties of the junior prom, Mr. Allen valiantly watching over this most perilous time . . . . 1967 — led by dedicated officers over the years: Sue Kullowatz, freshman secretary; Roe Hadley, freshman and junior president; Bob Gandolfi, freshman vice-president and sophomore president; Jim Newell, sophomore vice-president; Linda Colgan, freshman, sophomore, and senior treasurer; Sheri Delaware, sophomore and senior secretary; Karen Kaltenbacher, junior secretary; Bob Iwaszko, junior vice-president; Leanne Maiollini, junior treasurer; Steve LaCroix, senior vice-president; Tom Sanford, senior president . . . . 1967 — helped by outstanding athletes and active cheerleaders to pull the school towards more school spirit . . . . a class with a mobile surface — staying awhile, leaving years ago, coming for the last few months from Hawaii, Georgia, Kansas, Texas, Florida — but also a strong frame of those who have been here all along . . . . a class of athletes and intellectuals, individuals and conformists. . . .

How can one characterize a senior class? Just as a person is made not only of his physical self and limited mind, a class is made not only of separate people, but also of ideas, activities, even the actual school building. What about the popular sophomore Valentine dance, the rather successful freshman magazine sale — those activities designed to raise money for future activities and the class gift? There was the memorable prom at White Cliffs for which practically everyone helped plan and decorate. Jan Mitchell was the queen. There was the senior Thanksgiving pep rally with sloppy clothes and loud spirit preceding the victorious game. There was the Homecoming game and dance for which Sue Ehmann was queen. And the area—the view of changing leaves, carpet of pines, beaches, bridges, jets tracing the sky. . . .

Everything of these four years, bad and good, is now irrevocably part of each senior. The future of these people is therefore not so mysterious as it might at first appear. Every thought or action is partially based on the past, and a large part of that past will be these years, now ending, at Bourne High School.

CLASS REPORT

The now, bursting-forth, uninhibited, absolutely stylish and athletic and intellectual juniors looked forward to their Junior Prom with complete assurance that it would be the biggest and best in the history of Bourne High School. This spirited class, led by James Gandolfi, Scott Huff, Cathy Goulart, and Valla Endres, tackled the year's problems and work with the strong desire not to be outshone by the mighty seniors. Directed by Mr. Putnam, they very nearly succeeded. However, that junior year was only a prelude to the ultimate of goals—following in the footsteps of the exalted seniors, assuming momentous responsibilities, having at last the opportunity to seize a separate table in the cafeteria.

CLASS REPORT

Perhaps this year's sophomores revealed their "silliness" by winning that coveted title of "Class From Which the Most Boys Were Removed at Pep Rallies." Yet the Class of '69 displayed talent, maturity, and prospective greatness. In football and hockey one saw sophomore starters, while many clubs were graced by the presence of sufficient numbers of sophomores. After class officers were chosen, Student Council elections were held, and the sophomores began the gradual process of gaining a majority by electing Penny Burns, Carrie Comings, Anne Christopulos, Donna Fuller, and Kathy Gilmore.

CLASS REPORT

What distinguishes a freshman? Is it our hesitation going up the down staircase? At pep rallies is it our uninhibited clapping when we should be stomping or stomping when we should be clapping? Do we perhaps swell with pride at voting but shrink from naming candidates? Is it the drooling over senior super-athletes or the tears at not being rewarded for magazine subscriptions sold? Is it our eagerness to consult the counselor about college four years hence or our bitter lamentations over failing the first mid-year? We emulate the seniors' mini-skirts and long hair, but somehow everyone knows that we can't buy a class ring. Even as we try to merge in the hall traffic our 1970 license plates mean only one thing—yield!

From Cape Cod to Pakistan

In the summer of 1965 a Fulbright teaching grant from the U. S. government enabled Bourne High chemistry teacher, Richard Ormerod, to leave the pleasant security of Cape Cod for the exciting job of an exchange teacher in Pakistan. Before beginning his overseas assignment, he also toured many different European countries.

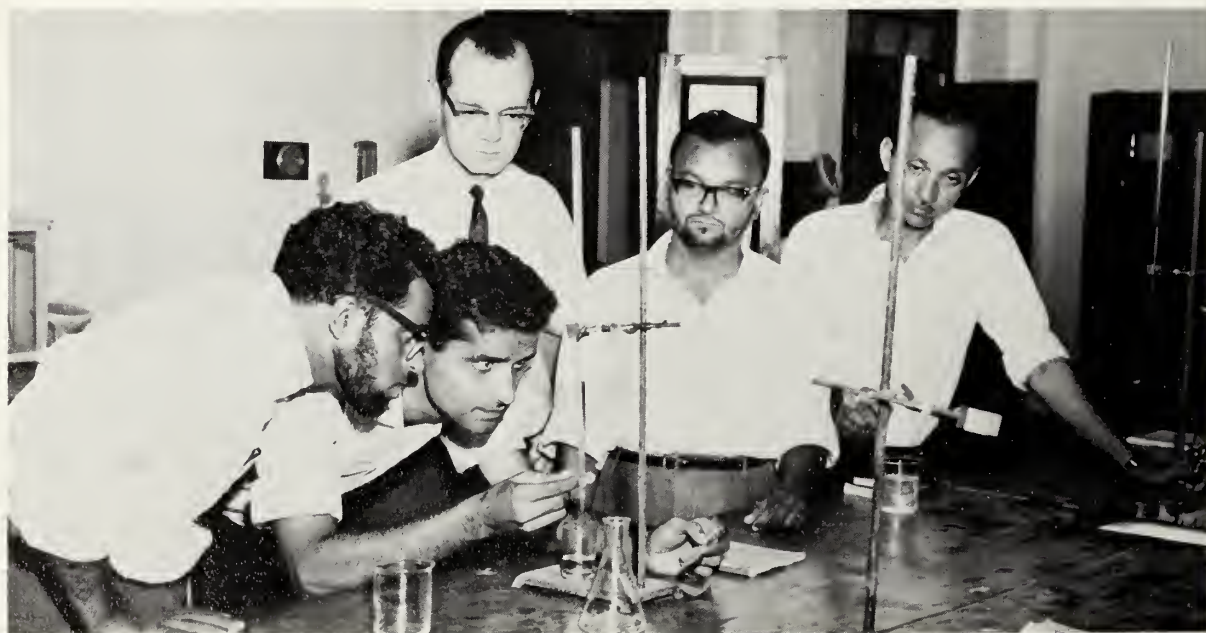

September found Mr. Ormerod teaching at B.V.S. Parsi High School in Karachi, Pakistan. Although sponsored by the Zoroastrian religious sect, this school was under the auspices of the Pakistanian Director of Education. However, after two short months the Pakistan-Indian War forced Mr. Ormerod to leave that country.

Mr. Ormerod next was transferred to Tehran, Iran, and assigned to the Ministry of Education. Although he taught a freshman chemistry class at the University of Tehran, his main work was to help train science teachers from the Caspian Sea to the Persian Gulf to use available science equipment well and to cope with existing conditions.

After he finished teaching, Mr. Ormerod traveled throughout the Orient to more closely observe Asiatic culture.

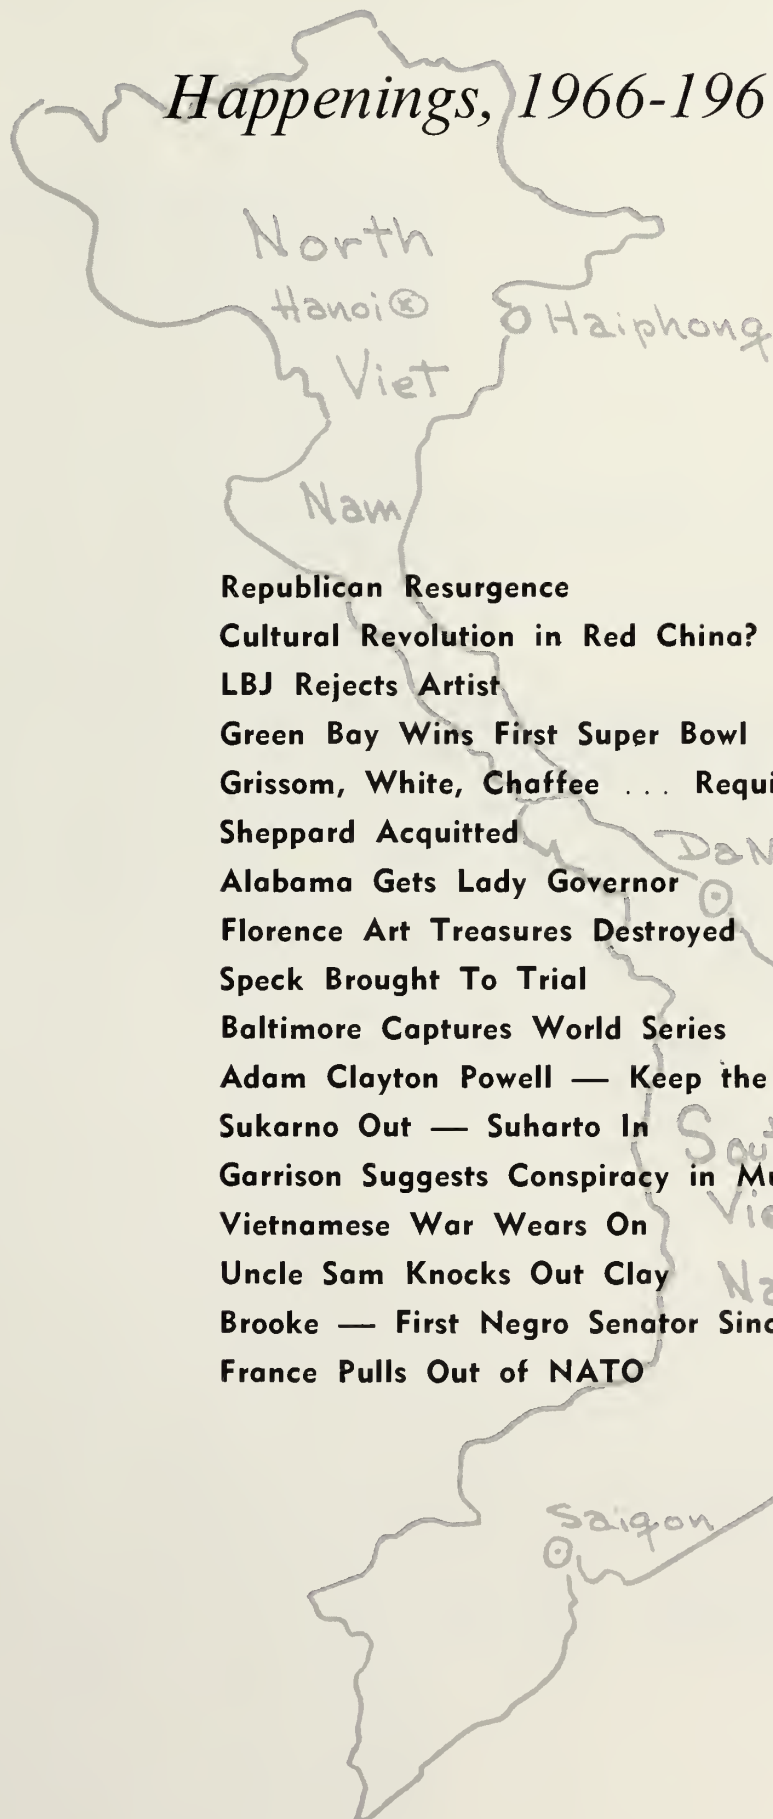

With his pictures, slides, and fascinating lectures, Mr. Ormerod brought such exotic places closer to many Canalmen.

Do you need a student handbook revised or a box in which to deposit suggestions or a Christmas tree to be decorated? Just call on the student council. This organization strives to provide the student body with a strong voice in school affairs.

NATIONAL HONOR SOCIETY

Today's exciting action Honor Society—not buried beneath shelves of books, not bound with stodgy platitudes, breaking away from the standard stereotype of the ascetic intellectuals—The James F. Peeble's Chapter of the National Honor Society plays a much more vital role in the affairs of Bourne High than one might at first suspect. Besides creating enthusiasm for scholarship and service to the community and school, besides setting high standards of leadership and moral integrity, this group tries to emphasize the importance of individualistic thinking and acting.

The main project of the year was the always impressive induction ceremony. However, members participated willingly in the tutoring service and the many fund-raising projects — the chrysanthemum sale, a stationery sale, an interesting car-smash. Most of the profits were donated to worthy charities.

CANAL CURRENTS

Under the careful direction of Mr. Frank Daley, the CANAL CURRENTS staff forged ahead to successfully complete this years publication. Editor-in-chief Nancy Smith, who replaced Florida-bound Nancy Campbell led the section supervisors who were: Production-Planning Editor Lee Coleman, Business Manager Alan Crosby, Subscription Manager Faith Small, and Copy Editor Chris Taylor. Several ideas for the 1967 CANAL CURRENTS cover were submitted by members of Mr. Lyons art class. Judged on the basis of originality, design, and appropriateness the editors chose Deanna Perry's.

With the help of twenty other dedicated staff members, copy was edited with the tireless patience of a giant machine, with quality as the ultimate goal. Suddenly confusion dwindled; pictures and articles fell into place; order reigned. The frenzied labor had ended, and its reward was invaluable knowledge and experience for the weary editors, and vivid record of their high school lives which they hope will serve the class of 1967 in perpetuity.

"We are the Future Homemakers of America.

Growing with friends, in mind, and in soul—that is the way to describe this organization and each of its members. The future homemakers best become known to many people through their entertainment and service activities during the year. Delegates participated in two exciting state meetings and one grand national convention; two eligible members will be sponsored as representatives to Girl's State this summer. Weekly meetings help the members keep in touch with this year's theme, "Your Neighbors Near and Far"—a theme that is carried out by a series of programs designed to guide the future homemakers "toward the new horizons that rim the world."

"Some future day when what is now is not . . .", in colleges across the country, present FTA members studying to become teachers will be very thankful for the training that they gained at Bourne. Those who are qualified are able to participate in a program of student-teaching at the Peebles Elementary School; and, learning more about this profession through actual experience, the members are now recovering from the shock of being helpless before a class. Mrs. Bachelder aids the group in planning such exciting activities as the trip to the Southern Massachusetts Institute of Technology where the members observed new methods of teaching. Not only do FTA members learn to express themselves well before groups, they also become more aware of the problems of their own teachers.

Ranging from lovely bake sales to the victorious Homecoming dance, including collecting materials for under-privileged people and raising money for the annual scholarship, this year's projects were enthusiastically promoted by all.

Now then, girls, who would like to serve at the honorary banquet for Snoopy and the Red Baron?

Athletic Association

Braving the frenzied crowds of basketball and football spectators—crowds which frequently resemble landings at the Normandy beach heads—girls of the Bourne High Athletic Association cheerfully sell and collect tickets, pass out programs and minister to the limitless hunger of the rather ravenous gatherings. At each game these girls calmly face the endless problems—the man with the twenty dollar bill; the lady with eight children, two complimentary tickets, and five miniature French poodles. Under the happy-go-lucky direction of Mr. Leo G. Manning—"I'm missing a penny here, girls"—the Athletic Association plays an important part in the effectual operation of our athletic events.

"Esto Perpetuo" — Guided by that "wise but humble" magister, Mr. Brogioli, the Latin Club continued to champion the language of ancient Rome. President Linda Surprise, Vice President Donna Fuller, Treasurer Linda Jarvis, Secretary Valla Endres, and Reporter Priscilla Cook were particularly enthusiastic with their support of what some consider to be a dead-and-should-be-buried-language. Projects were discussed and a field trip undertaken to further the cause of Latin.

Science Club

The membership of the club formed to provide constructive outlets for tomorrow's nuclear physicists and muon microbe analysts has more than doubled since last year. Under the able direction of Mr. Sturgis an increase in size was accompanied by an increase in opportunities for members to obtain information on many new and varied subjects. The club joined the Ford Science Foundation, a national organization of high school science clubs, and consequently has the use of the Foundation's excellent library. Each of the members chose a long-term project to be completed for the Science Fair. This active group certainly improves the scientific aspect of Bourne High.

Singing French songs and learning French customs, members of Le Cercle Français welcomed the many newcomers into their Frenglish midst. ## German Club meets monthly

One of the goals of the German Club, to acquaint its members with ideas and traditions of other countries, was realized this year by having guest lecturers whose personal experiences have helped them to become familiar with life in various foreign nations. Because membership in Der Deutsche Verein, advised by Mr. Kenneth Lagerstedt, is no longer limited to students who have had at least one year of German language, the club this year has increased in number.

It has become a tradition that the group spend a day in Boston before going to the Tivoli Evening, an evening of singing, dancing, and dining for German Club members from all over the state. This event, sponsored by the German department of Boston University, was the highlight of this year's activities.

Turkey-Day Twirlers

Ah! Pulchritude divine! This year the high-stepping majorettes, led by Salyan Downing and Pat Fizer, helped keep spirit high and the Canalmen sailing by performing at pep rallies and football games. With metronomic precision they represented Bourne well in various parades and band functions. By supplementing the traditional twirling and marching with cartwheels, somersaults, leaps, and flips they kept the routines interesting and the audiences awake. ### THE SHAWME BAND

"All-Cape Day" at Fenway Park, the Bourne Memorial Day Parade, the Hyannis Santa Claus Parade, a Northhampton audition, Fairhaven march, a performance at Otis Air Force Base—the efficient leadership of Mr. Robert Frazier guided this well-traveled group through much of eastern Massachusetts. Each developing musician participated enthusiastically to create an exciting musical stimulus at pep rallies and football games, to provide an entertaining half-time program at the Homecoming festivities. Such rhythmic beats are perhaps taken for granted by many Canalmen and the long hours of arduous practice with subsequent aching arms and feet ignored. But what would happen if one day some tired group of brass players decided to give up dragging around their ten-ton tubas? Bourne would lose that up-beat sparkle that the band manages to add to all the games.

CHORUS

Melody, harmony, rhythm, timbre, and form ... Whether in full number, vocal ensemble, or solo performances Bourne High's chorus members receive the careful instruction of a conscientious music director. A crowded year of singing for Christmas concerts in Bourne and Boston, for the Honor Society induction, Spring Concert, and graduation festivities demands much of the vocalists. Each member's willingness to work all the harder to reach perfection accounts for the excellent reputation of the Bourne High Chorus.

FOOTBALL 1966

A stiff schedule, mistakes, and inevitable bad breaks make a football coach's job discouragingly hard. Hampered by little depth, light linemen, and an extremely small backfield, Coach Burns was forced to utilize many sophomores this year. The 1966 season, however, did end in the blaze and glory that Canalmen have come to expect.

In the first game of the year an inexperienced Bourne football team with only five returning starters (Bob Iwaszko, Roe Hadley, Jim Newell, Bob Gandolfi and Jamie Gandolfi) traveled to Monsignor Coyle High School. Plagued by numerous mistakes, the canalmen were forced to play defensive ball throughout 70% of the game, which ended in defeat, 6-0.

On a rain-soaked Barnstable field, the Canalmen came from behind in the final minutes to slash Barnstable's hope

Having tasted victory, there was no stopping the Bourne machine. At Jackson Memorial Field the canalmen rolled to a 22 to 8 victory over Dennis-Yarmouth Regional High School. Jamie Gandolfi's 60 yard run, behind the blocking of fellow Sagamorians—Roe Hadley, Jim Newell, Bob Gandolfi, and Pete Ruggerio—inspired the canalmen to their second consecutive victory.

Seven days later at Medfield Bourne won an upset victory over an undefeated Medfield eleven, 18-6. Bob Iwaszko's performance earned him a second Player of the Week award.

Bourne then defeated Dartmouth High on the latter's home field, 30-12. In this game Jim Newell and Dennis January broke into the scoring column along with Bob Iwaszko, who, for the third time, was chosen Player of the Week.

The next week tension mounted as fans looked forward to the Michigan State-Notre Dame game of Cape Cod: Falmouth versus Bourne. A victory for either team practically assured a Capeway Conference title. Equally matched, the two teams plunged into battle with Lawrence High emerging ahead, 16-12. This was Bourne's second loss of the season.

Bourne celebrated Homecoming day with a 18-7 victory over Fairhaven, setting the stage for the traditional Thanksgiving Day encounter.

For the third consecutive year Bourne blanked Wareham with the final score being 15-0. For his outstanding, all-around play Jim Newell was chosen Most Valuable Player of the Thanksgiving Day game.

Canal Cagers have disappointing season

Although not realized at the time, a preview of the 1967 season was witnessed in the first game when Bourne had to struggle to defeat a weak Chatham team 46 to 43. The inability of Coach Brogioli's team to put the ball in the hoop is evidenced by the fact that only twice during the season could they score 50 points or more. It is significant to note that in both these games the team was victorious, and, though it is only conjecture, a few more points in critical spots could well have earned the Canalmen a respectable won-lost mark.

The tenacious 1-2-2 zone defense employed by Bourne became a source of pride and accomplishment to the coach and team. The effectiveness of the team's defense is emphasized by the fact that the Canalmen's opponents were limited to an average of only 49 points per game. Bourne's fine defense held highly touted Dennis-Yarmouth to 42 points in the Dolphins last second win and the Clippers of Falmouth to 39 points in the latter's hard-fought victory. The inability of the Canalmen to score is accentuated in these two games particularly wherein despite limiting their opponents Bourne could muster only 38 and 30 points respectively in losing both encounters.

Junior Mike Alden and Seniors Bob Iwaszko and Steve LaCroix finished one, two, three in scoring with the latter two turning in commendable jobs off the boards against much taller opponents. The improved play of sophomores Britto and Brion together with some fine prospects from the Junior Varsity and Freshman teams should bolster Bourne's roundball fortunes next season.

Jay-vees post seesaw season

The 1967 edition of the Bourne Junior Varsity saw its fortunes reverse. At the mid-point of the season the team found itself mired in a losing streak whereupon the Junior Canalmen found themselves and closed the season with a rush winning five of their last seven games including come-from-behind victories over Dartmouth and Wareham.

Led by the scoring of Sol Chandler and Kent Kaltenbacher and the rebounding of Larry Brion and Dick Johnson the team improved with each game and will provide the varsity some creditable candidates next year.

Freshmen show hustle . . . desire to win

This year the mighty freshmen basketball team compiled an overall record of seven wins and four losses. It was the first winning season in three years for Coach Bill Homan's freshmen. Two very close games were lost to the undefeated Wareham team.

Players deserving special recognition are Bobby Cardoza, Ronnie Cardoza, and Chris Farley, who earned a promotion to the junior varsity mid-way through the season. While Bobby Cardoza showed exceptional ability as a rebounder and Ronnie Cardoza was the floor general with his fine dribbling and shooting, Chris Farley excelled in shooting skill and defensive play. Other freshmen who should be helping the varsity soon are Guy Johnson, Peter Tilton, Wayne Skinner, Steve Ouellette, and David Horner.

Oh, the disadvantages of the Bourne High Hockey Team!

In spite of their losing streak, the Canalmen's sparkling spirit never seemed to cease.

Led to the ice by captains Roe Hadley and Chuck Schuck, who were the Purple Wave's top scorers, the team maintained an amazing drive drive to "Go-Fight-etc."

Although the Canalmen could only come close in winning a league game, the boys managed to squeeze victories over non-league opponents Wareham and Stoughton.

Thanks to the dedication of Coach Kochnowicz and the help of Mr. Hopwood, frustration refused to replace enthusiasm as the Canalmen exhibited a natural love for hockey throughout the entire season.

Under the protective eye of Mrs. Anne Sullivan, cheerleading supervisor, the cheerleaders strove to mold student excitement into a shape somewhat resembling frenzied enthusiasm. Besides constructing various attractive and stimulating posters, thinking of exciting pep rally skits and original songs, perfecting and developing outstanding cheering techniques, the dancing manikins sparked various innovations such as marching with the majorettes and sponsoring a banquet for Wareham, Old Rochester, Barnstable, and Bourne cheerleaders.

The boys did very well in the tournament before losing to Ashland, the eventual winner, in the semi-finals. The team finished the season with a seventeen won and six lost record under the excellent leadership of Coach Bill Homan. The baseball team under the tutelage of Coach Homan has compiled a twenty-nine won and eleven lost record during the past two years.
